This course is a survey of modern and contemporary political ideologies and worldviews. It begins with an exploration of the term “ideology” and its importance to the study and practice of politics. How are ideas are composed to form ideologies which in turn structure the world for us? Are ideologies only a modern phenomenon? We see how the key concepts of politics—for instance, freedom, equality, justice, democracy, power, citizen—are framed within each ideology we encounter, en route to figuring out how each ideology then shapes the very domain of politics, and prescribes for us the meaning of our lives, our contentsions and contestations, and our basic human and political struggles. The course also hopes to make us more attentive in our use of words, labels and categories in politics, to see the nuances within the terms we employ in our everyday lives, appreciating their many interpretations and histories, and to rise to the challenge and the responsibility that comes with this appreciation.

REQUIRED TEXT

EXPECTATIONS & REQUIREMENTS

Attendance and Preparation
You are required to attend class having carefully prepared the assigned reading for the day. You must bring the text to class.
Active class participation is not only required, it is expected. The point is not to have understood everything before coming to class—you treasure is the questions, difficulties and issues that arise from what is read, because they eventually determine what course the class will take.
I will follow the college attendance policy, very strictly. Two unexcused absences will earn you an official warning. Three unexcused absences shall result in suspension. You must not be absent on the days you are the scribe, for that will automatically get you an F on that part of the course requirements.
Tardiness is disrespectful, and counts against you.

Written Work
Your assignments in this class will allow you to practice some of the most crucial (and often crucially neglected) skills required of engaged citizens. You will be tested on your ability to comprehend the ideas we are encountering as well as your ability to apply them in persuasive written arguments.

First, you will keep a meticulous journal throughout the semester to be handed in to me every two weeks, as mentioned on the syllabus, and then at the end of the semester, where you will trace a concept of your choice through different ideologies. You can map a set of concerns you have and see how different ideologies embody, answer or respond to it. The journal will contain your responses to, and reflections on the readings. But there is something you must keep in mind here. Imagine the journal as your notes to be used for your papers (see below). The point is to explore possibilities of forms of interpretation. (Let the course goals guide you here, in the form of questions to be addressed.)

You will be required to write two shorter papers (5-7 pages) and a longer final paper (12-14 pages). These are primarily exegetical and imaginative papers that will require your use of the texts, your journals, the films, and class discussion. These are NOT research papers, hence you will not be required to consult any other sources apart from those stated. I will provide specific paper instructions and a choice of topics/questions to be addressed.

Films
Where possible, I have assigned films to supplement our readings. Please note down the relevant weeks, and we will work together to find a time that works for everyone. This will probably be an evening outside of normal class time, if the film is a full-length feature.

For course policies on Academic Honesty and Religious Holidays, please refer to the SRC Catalogue, pp. 31-33. For issues of learning skills, and subsequent accommodations, please get in touch with me, and also contact Rebecca Fiske (rebecca@simons-rock.edu).
